The PANDO EFFECT™

During his many years as a musician and sound engineer, Felix Pando discovered that certain sounds and frequencies created a symbiotic relationship between music and those who listen to it. The effect of this interaction is to create a stress-free surrounding in which animals can relax and feel healthier and more at ease because:

- ♪ Each composition contains special musical frequencies only pets can detect.
- ♪ The album incorporates familiar sound effects that create the illusion that your pet is not home alone, helping alleviate any sense of loneliness.
- ♪ Special instruments were selected for these compositions for their proven calming effect.

This technique of using distinctive instruments and special sounds found naturally in our environment is what we call the PANDO EFFECT™. Both pets and their owners will enjoy and benefit from the calming influences of these harmonious melodies and find that they enhance their lives together.

“Music has always been a part of my life.”

Music has always been part of Felix Pando’s life. A critically acclaimed and internationally renowned musical producer, composer and arranger, Felix began playing the piano at age two. By the time he was four, he had already performed his first classical music concert in his native Argentina, and at the age of sixteen he founded the number one selling rock group in Latin America, “La Joven Guardia” (The New Guard). Felix earned two gold records and received the Best Composer Award given by the Argentine Copyright Society.

In 1978 Felix was awarded a scholarship to study sound engineering in Germany. For the next twenty-six years he remained in Germany and was recognized throughout Europe as one of the leading producers of compositions for movies, theater and television. In 1996, he was appointed to be the musical arranger for the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra.

In the mid-1990’s Felix Pando became deeply involved in the research and creation of music that provides a soothing and relaxing environment for its listeners. After a period of extensive experimentation, he also discovered that certain instruments, such as the viola, violin, flute, xylophone and the music box, played at specific frequencies, had a comforting and calming effect on infants. Felix subsequently developed a series of albums targeted at infants and toddlers that are still widely sold throughout Europe today.

Felix Pando recently moved to the United States, where he has established his own record company, Pando Partners, LLC. His latest line of albums utilizes the same type of instrumental and acoustical techniques that he applied to his music for infants, but instead is specifically designed for dogs and cats. This new series of CDs uses instruments that produce sounds at certain frequencies that are particularly appealing to animals.

The soothing qualities of this music has a positive effect on your pet's emotions and helps them feel more tranquil and at ease.

This extraordinary impact that Felix Pando's compositions has on pets is no mere coincidence. It is the result of his singular talent, his vast knowledge of music and sound design, and his extensive experience gleaned from an impressive musical career that spans more than four decades.
